

Title:

Learning to Draw? You're Gonna Need a Pencil

Word Count:

681

Summary:

Information for budding artists. A discussion of the various pencil types available.

Keywords:

art, drawing, pencil drawing, how to draw, learn to draw

Article Body:

If you're going to be doing any pencil drawing you're going to need a pencil. I know, I know,

Here are some of the options:

Mechanical Pencils, Lead Holders, Woodless Graphite, And ofcourse traditional wooden pencils

Mechanical Pencils: You're probably familiar with these. They're the ones that hold the lead (

Lead Holders: These are somewhat similar to mechanical pencils in that you can use various lea

Woodless Graphite: These pencils are basically a piece of graphite in the shape of a pencil. T

Wooden Pencils: Okay. We all know what a wooden pencil is. It's the yellow one with a pink era

Well yes, those are pencils, but a set of good quality drawing pencils comes with a lot more v

The number 2 pencils we're so familiar with are right in the middle in terms of hardness. They

But there is a better way. That's where the softer pencils come in. After #2 in terms of softn

For the harder pencils, I rarely use anything harder than a 2H and that's usually just for the

So to wrap this up, if you're planning on getting a little more serious with your drawing you'

I prefer traditional wooden pencils for my drawings and my brand of choice is Derwent. They ma

So now go out, get yourself some good pencils, and start drawing....

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>