

Title:

What Are The Different Types Of Fine Art Reproduction?

Word Count:

528

Summary:

As well as hand painted fine art reproductions on canvas, there are several different mechanical

Aquaprint: Is a printing process which uses color separation. The colors can be bright but the Artagraph: The artagraph is a special printing method whi...

Keywords:

Art Reproduction, painting

Article Body:

As well as hand painted fine art reproductions on canvas, there are several different mechanical

Aquaprint: Is a printing process which uses color separation. The colors can be bright but the

Artagraph: The artagraph is a special printing method which recreates not only the color of the

Canvas transfer: Canvas transfer art reproductions are basically prints on canvas rather than

Etchings: The art reproduction image is etched into a copper plate, ink is then applied to the

Giclees: Are produced from a color transparency made from the original oil painting usually by

Hand painted: This method of fine art reproduction involves a trained artist carefully copying

Lithograph: Basically this is standard offset printing. The art reproduction image is drawn on Serigraphy: Also known as screen prints. Serigraph art reproductions are produced by creating

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>