

Title:

Companies Stifle Intrapreneurs At Their Own Risk

Word Count:

636

Summary:

I've noticed an interesting trend lately. Usually the e-mail I receive in response to this col
Lately, however, many of the messages are coming from employees of medium-size and large compa

Keywords:

success, hardwork, small business, experience, business, email, e-mail, policy, professional,

Article Body:

I've noticed an interesting trend lately. Usually the e-mail I receive in response to this col
Lately, however, many of the messages are coming from employees of medium-size and large compa
These folks are asking how best to move from being someone else's bored employee to coming int
These people are called "intrapreneurs," and their ranks are growing, which should be of great
By definition, intrapreneurs are employees who think with an entrepreneurial slant. Instead of
They are always thinking of ways to improve products or processes. They are innovators, creati Most big companies don't want employees who think independently. They don't want employees who
The primary difference between entrepreneurs and intrapreneurs is that the intrapreneur would
They are perfectly happy working for someone else if the environment offers opportunities for Sadly, most big companies do not know how to nurture their intrapreneurs. Just the opposite is They hand you a written job description and expect you to operate within its parameters. When Intrapreneuring is nothing new. As long as there have been employers and employees, there have Just because the Internet boom went bust does not mean the mentality of this generation of ent
To the contrary, intrapreneurs are now part of practically every midsize to large organization
The only way to convert the focus of these employees, who are usually the most talented people
We are in the age of ownership, where everyone from the CEO to the janitor has more opportunit
Here's to your success.

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>