

Title:

Comparison Of Steelpad Steel4s And Steel5l & Review Of Logitech G5 Laser Mouse

Word Count:

752

Summary:

It was early March and I decided to upgrade my trusty Microsoft Optical mouse that I had been

I looked on the web and checked out reviews on mice and then start reading about the combinati

Now that I'm a little older and the ^buy cheap, buy twice~ policy makes so much sense, I...

Keywords:

logitech g5 review, steel series review, steelpad review, steel pad review, 4s, 5l, mousepad r

Article Body:

It was early March and I decided to upgrade my trusty Microsoft Optical mouse that I had been

I looked on the web and checked out reviews on mice and then start reading about the combinati

Now that I'm a little older and the ^buy cheap, buy twice~ policy makes so much sense, I came

This brought me to two items

- 1) Logitech G5 Laser Mouse
- 2) SteelSeries Mousepad 4S (Rigid metal mouse pad with chemical etched matt black surface)

I nearly bit the hand off the delivery guy on the morning they were delivered, frantically unw

I plugged the mouse in and loaded the software

First impressions of the G5

- 1) It looked good. Felt great.
- 2) I didn't like the wheel (it provided a lot more resistance than the Microsoft Optical mouse

I messed around with the weights and decided that it wasn't for me so I put the Logitech G5 La

NOTE: READ THE REST OF THE REVIEW AND SEE HOW MY MIND CHANGED

Next for the Steelpad 4S Steel

Now this looked good, felt good and best of all, it performed. Using my Microsoft optical mouse

Much better.

A week passed and I'd not had a chance to send the G5 back - for some reason I thought I'd give

I got it setup as before and initially it felt better on the 4S Steel surface than the optical

I used the left and right on the scroll wheel to act as middle button so that it would open up

It was starting to grow on me. The final straw was that I had an identical MS Optical mouse on

A week or so passed and I started to get irritated with the scraping noise of the G5 Laser Mou

As I really liked Steelpad's presentation and performance, but not the noise ~ I went back and

I now have the best combination of all now. The best mouse and it's tied in with the best mouse

If you want a great combination don't bother with the 4S, get the 5L and the Logitech G5 laser

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>