Article Body:
Over the last few years, the picture quality in digital cameras has becoming amazing. As recent years have shown, digital cameras are becoming more popular than film cameras. When you buy a digital camera, the most important thing you should look for is how many mega pixels the camera has. However, how many mega pixels the camera has is not the only thing you should consider. Battery life, size, and price are also important factors. Ultimately, the best thing to do with digital cameras is to either buy the cheapest one you can find or the most expensive one. As a final note, if you just want a cheap digital camera to take around with you and take occasional photos, a digital camera is a good choice.
