

Title:

Do the world's poor children really need a $100 laptop?

Word Count:

499

Summary:

The chairman and founder of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Media Lab recently launched

Keywords:

$100, laptop, worldwide, poor, technology, economics, poverty, MIT

Article Body:

The chairman and founder of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Media Lab recently launched

MIT rolled out a non-profit association, called One Laptop Per Child, to design, manufacture and

The internet connectivity question is addressed in a few different ways, including the use of

The solution offered is a $100 laptop: a durable, versatile machine at a price the developing

The strongest argument in favour of this cheap laptop idea rests on the laurel that the greatest

Most educators would argue that effective learning stems from a fundamental level of personal

The economics of a $100 laptop base around the following: Around half the purchase price of a

Physically the most expensive aspect would be the display. The use of an MIT technology called

It's now without doubt that the $100 laptop will happen. As to whether it's a good idea? Every

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>