Article Body:

The Internet has revolutionized the whole ambit of communications and has proved to be a boon for everyone.

Your computer can get affected with Spyware or Adware very easily but this happens mostly through the Internet.

Spyware can help someone do the following illegal functions:

- 1) Read your e-mails
- 2) Access your e-mail list
- 3) Watch which keystrokes you are typing
- 4) Access your credit card information that might be stored in your computer
- 5) Get to know your passwords listed in your computer
- 6) Steal your social security number
- 7) Track all the websites that you visit

It is, therefore, essential for you to know whether your computer is infected with spyware or not.

- 1) If your computer starts running slower
- 2) If some programs do not run correctly
- 3) If you notice some programs that you were previously not aware of. These could have been installed by spyware.

Perfect Solution for detecting and removing Spyware from your computer

The perfect antidote to the menace of spyware is to download a spyware detection tool, which will scan your computer for spyware.

After using a reputable anti-spyware tool, if you still have problems then what's the solution?

It is quite possible that even a good anti-spyware tool might not be able to obliterate unwanted spyware.

Since most anti-spyware tools specify which spyware variants they can detect and remove, it is important to choose a tool that can detect and remove the spyware you are dealing with.

Just as a virus can invade your body and cause various diseases and even death, spyware can also invade your computer and cause various problems.
