Article Body:

In simple terms, a device that provides monitoring of the things that the baby does when you are away.

1. Wireless and plug-in are the two types of baby monitors that are available in the market. The wireless ones are more convenient as they do not require any cables.
2. Refrain from purchasing a baby monitor that is of a huge size. Go for a portable size so that you can carry it easily.
3. Check that the speaker that is an attachment to the camera is really sensitive so that you can hear the baby clearly.
4. Make sure the baby monitor has an in-built alarm clock so that you can store the timings for the baby's sleep.
5. If your baby monitor affords you to go longer distances than nothing like it. It will increase the range of the monitor.
6. It's ideal if the baby monitor functions on a low battery indicator. It is also crucial that the monitor has a low battery indicator.
7. Purchase a baby monitor that comes with many channels so you can select an interference-free channel.
8. In order to prevent Sudden Infant Death Syndrome or SIDS, you should go for a few more costly models.
9. Last point to consider, and certainly this is not of least importance, check the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) certification.

Go ahead and buy a baby monitor that includes all these features so that it would give you maximum protection for your baby.
