

Title:

Credit Cards: An Unnecessary Evil

Word Count:

630

Summary:

Credit is easy to get and hard to get out of. Find out how to take control of your credit and

Keywords:

debt, debt control, finance, finances, financial, money, financially free, out of debt, financ

Article Body:

Why are we in debt? Why is a majority of all people living with debt beyond their means? We

It is really quite simple. This is what the credit card companies allow, this is what they wa

Everybody likes to get paid on time, but your creditors actually prefer the opposite. They wa

Now granted they don't want you to be too late or to default, but a week or two is just great.

You can now make your minimum payment of $20. The math does not work in your favor. Let's ju

This is why credit cards are evil and we must learn to do without them!

The first step in this process is to gather up all of your credit cards and destroy them. You

This may seem extreme, but most people do not have the will power to simply not use the card.

If you can't bring yourself to cutting up your cards, at least gather them all up and store th

The key is to not have them accessible for those impulse purchases that we come across every d

Don't forget to cancel the cards that you are no longer going to use. Most credit cards have

Some cards may charge you a closed account fee to persuade you to stay with them. At this tim

Now that the temptation is out of the way you can start paying them off. Just remember to pay

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>