

Title:

How To Find Government Grants

Word Count:

461

Summary:

Each year, the federal government gives out over 150 billion dollars in Government funded grants.

Despite the abundance of grant programs available, many businesses and individuals are finding it difficult to find the grants they need.

Keywords:

government grants, grants, federal grants, grant money, free grants

Article Body:

Each year, the federal government gives out over 150 billion dollars in Government funded grants.

Despite the abundance of grant programs available, many businesses and individuals are finding it difficult to find the grants they need.

When researching for Government Grants, one of the best resources for research is the Internet.

If this fails you, you may try visiting another government run website, cfda.gov - The Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance.

If you still cant find information on the type of grant that you require, there are many commercial grant search engines available. Some of these engines are free, but if it saves you time and helps you find the grant that you are searching for, it is worth the cost.

Once you have found information on the grant that you hope to apply for, it would be a good idea to contact the grant administrator for more information.

There are numerous government grant programs available. Locating them can be tricky, but is often worth the effort.

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>