Article Body:

Students are often portrayed as being lazy, indolent, or, perhaps most damningly of all: scruffy.

In fact, the operation involved in conveying a freshly minted student to the halls of their chosen university is a complex one.

It doesn't stop at electrical goods either, as expensive clothing hits higher on the priority list.

All of which begs the question: What if it all just disappears?

Theft, as it always has, runs rife throughout the UK - a recent survey by the Home Office (<http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk>)

The task of insurance, however, usually falls to the parent. This has not gone unnoticed by the insurance industry.

It's often a good idea to use an insurance provider databases service like MoneyNet (<http://www.moneynet.co.uk>)

Well, it's risky, but the choice is yours.
