It seems like I am always answering the question as to whether trading can be done meaningfully

Somehow people have been convinced that you have to spend hour upon hour in front of computer

This may sound strange coming from someone who used to be a professional analyst and really do

Effective part-time trading is simply a matter of maximizing the time you have available. That

I'll use myself as an example.

My schedule is somewhat convoluted. I travel frequently and my activities have a seasonal nature

Regardless of my time availability, though, I always do the same thing. I scan the charts for My available trading time will dictate which timeframe charts I look at when doing my scan. If

What is more, I don't ever have to trade. That's a major advantage for part-time traders. Unlike

Let's face it. Full-time trading is a commitment most of us will either never be able to or ne
