

Title:

All Types Of Chinese Teas Explained

Word Count:

582

Summary:

Probably you are familiar with the Chinese saying, ^Firewood, rice, oil, salt, sauce, vinegar,

There are actually thousand of Chinese tea varieties. These are usually classified by procedur

Keywords:

Article Body:

Probably you are familiar with the Chinese saying, ^Firewood, rice, oil, salt, sauce, vinegar,

There are actually thousand of Chinese tea varieties. These are usually classified by procedur

Now, let's take a look at these classes one by one.

Green Tea

Green tea is said to be the most natural type of Chinese tea. It is usually picked, naturally

According to some experts, green tea has the most medicinal value and the least caffeine conte

Oolong Tea

This type of Chinese tea is halfway between green tea and black tea in a sense that it is half

Oolong tea leaves are basically withered and spread before undergoing a brief fermentation pro

Black Tea

The Chinese black tea produces full-bodied amber when brewed. Also, this type of Chinese tea u

Red Tea

As the name implies, this type of Chinese tea has red leaves and red tea color. This color is

White Tea

This type of Chinese tea is sometimes considered as subclass of green tea. Perhaps it is for t

Yellow Tea

Apparently, yellow tea has yellow leaves and yellow tea color. According to some experts, this

Flower Tea

Here is a unique type of Chinese tea ~ the Flower tea. It actually subdivides into Flower Tea

Compressed Tea

The final type of Chinese tea is the compressed tea. This class uses black tea as base tea. It

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1
Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>
Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>