

Title:

Chinese Tea Types And Its Production Since The Early Years

Word Count:

552

Summary:

Chinese has been drinking tea for approximately 4,000 years. Along with firewood, rice, oil,

Types of Tea

The Chinese tea may be classified into five types according to the different methods by which

- Green Tea ~ is the variety which keeps the original color of the tea leaves without fermenta

- ...

Keywords:

Article Body:

Chinese has been drinking tea for approximately 4,000 years. Along with firewood, rice, oil,

Types of Tea

The Chinese tea may be classified into five types according to the different methods by which

- Green Tea ~ is the variety which keeps the original color of the tea leaves without fermenta

- Black Tea ~ This is known as ^red Chinese tea~, the type which is fermented before baking.

- Wulong Tea ~ Also known as Oolong Chinese tea, this category represents a variety half way b

- Compressed Tea ~ is the kind of Chinese tea which is compressed and hardened into a certain

- Scented Tea ~ This kind of Chinese tea is known as ^scented~ because it is made by mixing fr

The Tea Production

Chinese has maintained that a new tea plant must grow for five years before its leaves can be

The season of tea picking generally depends on the local climate and it varies from area to ar

On the shores of West Lake in Hangzhou, where the famous green tea Longjing comes from, it was

After the harvest, the new leaves must be parched in tea cauldrons. Accordingly, this work has

For the processes of grinding, parching, rolling, shaping and drying, different kinds of machi

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>