Adequan has been proven to be specially absorbed by inflamed joints when interjected into the joint.

In treating inflammation of a joint or joints (arthritis), injections are given two times a week.

Adequan does all this without potential fallouts. To know its possible side effects, a study was conducted.

Some humans who have used Adequan have reported that it burns a little. After injecting, Adequan causes a slight stinging.

Adequan binds to damaged cartilage and advances cartilage metabolism, easing repair processes.

Adequan has not been analyzed in pregnant or breastfeeding animals. At first 8-dose series is given.
