

Title:

Can you tell the difference?

Word Count:

584

Summary:

This article features fear and anxiety. The article, however, first showed similarities of the

Keywords:

Fear and anxiety

Article Body:

Fear and anxiety are sometimes interchanged by writers. Some web writers give similar definitions

Fear is described to be poignant emotion that cues for, or signals, any imminent danger.

Meanwhile, anxiety is described to be an overwhelming emotion of fear, distress, worry.

Fear and anxiety, however, have similarities in some respects. These, maybe, are some

Both are bodily responses against impending and life-threatening situations. No normal

Both, on the surface, seem to be harmless, but can be life-risking. Fear and anxiety,

Even with these apparent similarities, fear and anxiety are certainly not the same.

Fear is one of the complex emotions that is involved in anxiety. As mentioned on www.w

Let's take the example of AIDS. Certainly, many people fear just the thought of it. Ho

To make sense, fear is one of the complex emotions that is interspersed in the intricate

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>