

Title:

Dealing With Loss Teaching Your Children About Life And Death

Word Count:

453

Summary:

At some point or another you and your children will be faced with death.

It's important that you teach your children that death is merely an aspect of life, and help t

One of the best things you can do to prepare your children for the prospect of a death is to t

Your approach to the subject may vary a little depending on your spiritual beliefs. Some cultu

Keywords:

Article Body:

At some point or another you and your children will be faced with death.

It's important that you teach your children that death is merely an aspect of life, and help t

One of the best things you can do to prepare your children for the prospect of a death is to t

Your approach to the subject may vary a little depending on your spiritual beliefs. Some cultu

It is important that you consider your spiritual and emotional beliefs about death and come to

This will help you facilitate a more impacting and clear cut conversation when the time arises

Here are some suggestions for broaching the topic with your children:

Talk With Your Children About the Cycle of Life ~ Consider discussing death with them at a tim

Acknowledge Your Own Feelings ~ In order for your children to accept death you must first come

Be Open and Honest About Feelings ~ Many parents have a natural instinct to shield their child

Remember when teaching children about death and dying that their initial reactions may be very

Rather than focusing on the spiritual or emotional aspects of death they may want to know more

Remember that this is perfectly normal. Address each question honestly and age appropriately w

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>