Article Body:

It doesn't seem to matter how big your garage is: you can always fill it up with stuff. Sure,

1. Hang things from the ceiling.

Garages usually have plenty of headroom, so that leaves many cubic feet of space you can exploit.

2. Make use of wall space.

You've probably got at least one pegboard in the tool area of your garage, but there's no reason

3. Cabinets are for garages too.

Most garages have enough room on the sides or in the back to accommodate banks of cabinets, which

4. If you have too many vehicles, try a car lift.

You've got a good 10-12 feet of height in your garage, right? And the average car is less than

5. Think garage sale.

If you've tried your hardest to find storage space for everything, but you're still tripping over
