Next to the much-hyped up storage capacity, usability is what makes Gmail the best. My favorite

Another thing is that when you are logged out, you cannot receive offline messages. Of course,

Speaking of email, one of Gmail's main selling points is that you never have to delete old email.

When you exchange a series of emails with another person, you will get each mail under the same

I also like how much easier it is to view and download attachments. You can even choose to download

With all these features, it's no wonder many other email providers are following Google's example.
