

Title:

Learning From Online Business Failures

Word Count:

1034

Summary:

I remember reading a book on Judo a long time ago. It advised that to be a good martial arts p

Keywords:

webmasters, website, online business, webpage, advice, failure

Article Body:

I remember reading a book on Judo a long time ago. It advised that to be a good martial arts p

Failure is endemic in everything we do. The world is uncertain and many of the best laid plans in the real world--quitting. Quitting is the sure fire way to lose at anything. You have effec

I don't claim to be a super success in what I do but I have learned a couple of things along t

Wrong Way Number One: Take things personally

Many things happen to webmasters that are out of their control. Servers crash. Traffic fails t

A better way to state failure is to take ownership and control of them. "I designed my site wr

Wrong Way Number Two: Blame someone else

Failure and disappointment are everywhere. That's the way it has been, the way it is, and the

Don't get me wrong--there are many instances when, rightly, others are to blame. However, when

Wrong Way Number Three: Habit vs. Evolution

There's a reason people laughed at Columbus because he thought the world was round. Or at Cope

There are two main types of people. On the one hand, there are people that naturally gravitate

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>