Gone are the days when folks relied on their family doctors to keep them informed about health

For example, a health website may include:

- facts about prescription drugs
- details about specific surgeries and treatment options
- a list of medical specialists and health care facilities in your area
- "Ask the Expert" columns
- information about clinical trials of the past and present
- links to popular health-related articles
- interactive tools such as calorie counters; body mass calculators, quizzes
- forums, chat rooms, and message boards covering a wide range of topics
