Bird Watching Journals

Take a minute to give some consideration to your most recent bird watching experience. What st

There are famous instances of people keeping journals throughout time. Of course, Anne Frank's

A good bird watching journal combines a number of characteristics. First, it should be compact

1. Who you went birding with,
2. Where you stayed and if you enjoyed it,
3. Who you met and contact information for them,
4. The geographic and weather conditions, and
5. The birds you sighted and added to your life list.

At the end of the trip, you should be able to get the following from your journal:

1. Contact information for other bird watchers and people you met,
2. Enough detail to provide you or a friend with a guide if you travel to the location a second
3. Memories to reflect upon years later, and
4. Something to pass on to your children and grandchildren.

To get the most out of your bird watching journal, you should write in it during and immediate

Bird watching is a great way to commune with nature. Make sure to preserve the experience.
