

Title:

My Prized Piece of Baseball Memorabilia

Word Count:

305

Summary:

I loved being the agent. Selling this contract that one of the founding fathers of baseball si

Keywords:

Harry Wright,Aron Wallad,Cincinatti Red,baseball memorabilia,

Article Body:

Back in the day ...

I used to deal in baseball cards, and some memorabilia in the mid to late 1980's. Through an o

I was impressed. I was so excited to be entrusted with this rare artifact. I remember saying t
^Oh my god. You have got to be kidding.~

I was astonished. I was in awe. I felt like I was let into a special group.

I sold the piece in the range of $10,000 - $12,000 if memory serves me. But selling the piece

Imagine, what it must have been like 130 years ago on the ball field. The baggy uniforms, and

Handling that document made the early times of baseball real for me. I visualized those men pl

Handling this artifact was like punching a time clock and never punching out. I was in basebal

I can see why some people are so zealous about baseball memorabilia. Their baseball fantasy ma

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>