But where do you look and how can you tell what's biased and what's unbiased? And where to find

My ideal golf website is created and run by a true golfaholic. Somehow who knows the game inside

Yes, I know; you can read about all this in magazines and there certainly are enough golf comm

To give you one example of what I am looking for. I do believe in training aids. I am not a go

Another technology I've become interested in is golf GPS. You can buy those at discount stores

Do sites like the ones I described above have to be completely non-commercial? I don't think so.
