Article Body:

A glance at a clothing boutique, a brisk walk down city streets, or an earful of automated customer service. Our world has stretched its borders and every person wanting to take advantage of that shift must learn a new language.

Knowing how to read, write, and speak another language is no longer a trend of the future but a reality of the present.

Given the impact that world customs are making within our borders, the TESOL exam comes to the fore as a necessary tool.

The question arises about the need to take the TESOL exam. Here are some things to ponder:

To Thine Own Self Be True. Taking the test is a sound tool to assess your actual level of language proficiency.

Talk the Talk, make the coin. Taking the TESOL will equip you to effectively teach a world that speaks many languages.

Taking Care of Business! Gone are the days of only conducting business on the West Coast and East Coast.

While training others to speak a native language and embracing world culture is favorable, the reality is that, nonetheless, it is difficult to ignore the truth that stares us square in the face. This truth is that millions of people need to learn to speak English.

The bottom line is simple: Millions of people need to learn to speak English. They'll pay you for it.
