So here is a simple metaphor for change. It is called ^The Egg~ and I hope you enjoy it.

I often have this feeling of stress and desperation because I am quite convinced nothing has c

I look around myself and all I see is what I always see.

Same house, same furniture, same pile of bills, same everything.

I work so hard and NOTHING is changing.

I thought that again about something the other day, and this large, beautiful golden egg came

There it is, and it just sits there in its nest of straw.

It doesn't DO anything.

It doesn't change shape, it doesn't change colour.

It doesn't pulsate. It doesn't roll around.

You could look at it for DAYS AND DAYS and you'd come away thinking that it was just that and

And yet, and if one was to extend one's feelers in a different way, one might become aware of

One day, and we know not when, the egg that lay so motionless for so very long and seemed to b

Yes, there was change.

Even if we thought there wasn't.
