Article Body:

Here, I focus on a range of items and features that we use in life without giving them a second

- 1) Coca-Cola: Did you know that its original colour was green?
- 2) Mohammed: Did you know that this is the most used name in the entire world?
- 3) Geographical Letters: Did you know that the name of each of the continents begins and concludes with the same letter?
- 4) Muscle Strength: Did you know that the strongest muscle in the entire body is that one which holds your eyelids together?
- 5) Credit Cards: In the United States, were you aware that each and every person has at least one credit card?
- 6) An Antique Machine: The word for an old machine that was once used for writing letters and numbers is typewriter.
- 7) Blink: Men wink at women, but research has found out that the average woman blinks nearly ten times a minute.
- 8) Suicide: Even though you might have wondered if it was possible, studies have discovered that you cannot commit suicide by jumping from a plane.
- 9) Licking: However much you may try, you will never be able to lick your elbows.
- 10) Sneeze: Try sneezing. People will automatically answer you with a bless you greeting. Have you ever noticed this?
- 11) The Blue Sky: Did you know that a pig, no matter how much they try, cannot look up into the sky?
- 12) Twisting Your Tongue: We have all dabbled with different tongue-twisters in our day. But do you know any?
- 13) Ribs: Did you know that you should try not to sneeze too strongly. Why? A very powerful sneeze can break your ribs.
- 14) Cards: Did you think that the Kings are all just random cards referring to random figures?
- 15) And finally: Most everyone reading this (Caught You!) are trying to lick their elbows at the moment.

Conclusion: Most of these are not scientific facts, but they are hilarious, funny and can be used as conversation starters.
