Article Body:

The question we should be asking is, by banning online gambling are we going to make things better?

The answer to that question is simple, banning legalized and regulated online gambling in any country is a bad idea.

If you want to keep a child from seeing an R rated movie you do not ban the movie from the theater.

So if you want to keep a child from gambling online then all the online casinos should be regulated.

The same goes for terrorists. If you believe terrorist groups are exploiting an unregulated market.

The ban on online gambling is much like the war on drugs. If marijuana was legalized in the USA.

By making online gambling in the USA a legalized form of adult entertainment it would also bring in more revenue.

This is how you improve society, not by telling people what to do. It is human nature to want to gamble.

People are just as likely to become addicted to gambling at a regulated casino as an unregulated one.

And in a regulated casino they will have information on how to get help if you have a gambling problem.

In the long run society can only prosper if we educate people on the dangers of gambling both online and in person.

It is about time the government learned this and stopped making the same mistakes year after year.
