Article Body:

Over the past few years it always bothered me that my husband would go play poker with his friends

I decided I had to come up with a way to make him choose me over his poker buddies so I tried

I also tried finding different events that he may want to go to like action movies, car shows

But after 6 months of trying I had just about given up, finally at my wits end I decided that

Eventually I started playing for real cash Online, and once or twice while he was at his game

Finally I felt I was good enough to make the challenge. So one night I told him that I wanted

So I felt this was my time to strike, I asked him if he would at least allow me to come and watch

So I said if he could do it how hard can it be that really got him going, so he then asked me

I said if he won I would pay for him to go to Las Vegas alone, he did not know I had made some

He looked at me suspiciously at first and I thought he was not going to risk it but he said ok

Well in the end it was me that lost, but he was so excited at how good I was that he did stop

Sometimes it really is better to try to get interested in his hobby.
