Article Body:

On July 4th of each year the citizens of the U.S. "we the people" commemorate our nation's birth. Independence Day like many summer holidays, gets overshadowed by things like parties, family gatherings, and picnics. Throughout our U.S. history millions have flocked to our shores seeking a life with this promise. Today it is easy to criticize what we find wrong with our country, our political, and our legal system. Before we can prophetically speak on the issues of societal freedom I think we must first look at ourselves. If you are currently living with an income that meets your basic needs of food and shelter, and you have a job, then you are free. Before you pick up your picket sign and go marching off to war for social justice, just take a moment to think about Jesus. Jesus gave us an invitation to follow Him in the way of real truth, real justice and real freedom. The struggle for each of us face is to be honest with where we are with these teachings in our lives. The teachings of Jesus in the Four Gospels give us clear cut directions on how to do this. I know it sounds simple, but it all starts with you.
