

Title:

Types of Interview Questions

Word Count:

412

Summary:

Interview is a vital part of recruitment procedure. Some interviews are followed by the written

Keywords:

Interview, interview questions

Article Body:

On the other hand, preparation is also needed by the interviewer for what questions to ask in

The open questions are asked usually in the beginning of interview such as `tell us about your

Closed questions are those questions that do not provide enough chance for interviewee to speak

In the hypothetical questions, a situation is created to assess the thinking abilities of the

The leading questions require logical answer. The interviewer may ask `this job requires working

Multi barreled questions are two or more combined questions relevant to the same topics. Such

The last category of the questions, behavioral questions are asked to foresee the future behavior

There are some questions which should be avoided to ask for example personal question about the

This is a demo version of txt2pdf v.10.1

Developed by SANFACE Software <http://www.sanface.com/>

Available at <http://www.sanface.com/txt2pdf.html>