As every flyer knows, the standard economy class on long haul airlines seems to be getting worse. Economy class provides precious little leg room and there is not much chance of being comfortable. Recently, airlines have been concentrating on bringing the more expensive classes to the masses. Another new focus in the airline industry is the addition of carriers that specialize in just business class. Airlines such as MaxJet, Eos Airlines and the new SilverJet offer trans-atlantic business class. Business class on these new airlines is perfect not only for business travelers but also for holidaymakers. If you are to fly transatlantic soon and you fancy paying a little more to elevate yourself out
