You've finally saved to go on that dream holiday you have been planning. Now you're wondering

Guess again! Anything can go wrong while you're traveling, and I strongly favor buying a policy

Most travel insurance policies are designed for a variety of travel needs but, I emphatically

You can find policies designed for any type of trip you may be planning, such as a single trip

Most policies cover trip cancellation, lost baggage, medical, dental, and accidental death cover

The premiums for the policies are generally 5% to 7% the cost of your trip, but fees will vary it is best not to buy your travel insurance from your tour operator. i have listed a few reasons

Most travel insurance policies offered by the operator are less flexible to your individual needs

Provide a lower amount of coverage;

May only cover a portion of the trip;

Your coverage may be secondary and the insurance will only pay for what you own private health

May duplicate coverage you already have;

In the event the tour operator liquidates and goes belly up, you would lose not only your trip

Many travel agents are not fully knowledgeable when it comes to understanding the details of v

If you do choose to buy your policy from your tour operator, be sure to use a credit card. Dep

When buying your policy from an insurance company:

Always get quotes from several companies

Ask if the plan is pre-packaged or if you can custom design your own

Can you waive the preexisting condition exclusion

Ask if you're covered for cancellation due to a terrorist incident. Don't count of the company

Ask any query you can dream up and

Do ask for suggestions
