Article Body:

Some call them "tag lines"; others refer to them as "catch lines" or "tie-in-slogans." Whatever

Do you recognize any of these? :

"Like a rock..."

"Fly the friendly skies..."

"It's the real thing !"

"Quality is job number one"

"The quicker-picker-upper"

Most of those tag lines are recognizable by us without even including the name of the company

They summarize in a very few words the essence of the thing they are promoting. They communicate

The shorter the description is, the more challenging it is to write. Anyone can write a 500-word

HERE ARE SOME TIPS for writing good taglines for your business offer.

1) Start by noticing ads on billboards as you drive down the road.

Billboard advertisers have but a couple of seconds to grab your attention and sell their product

2) Notice other media forms like magazine and newspaper display ads, business cards, brief radio

Observe the thing that caught your attention and makes the message easily remembered. It's usually

3) Write down everything you can think of that relates to your business. You may even start with

4) Now, make a list of the top 25 or 30 things that are important and worth mentioning.

Whittle that list down to 8 or 10 of the most important things you wish to say.

Now eliminate repetition or things that are not really that necessary to your product or service

Get your list of words or phrases down to 3 or 4 central elements.

5) Based on your final core selection, make up some phrases that will serve as your taglines for

Which of these taglines would you remember best? :

"Joe's auto repair shop, the lowest-prices and the best service"

OR

"Quality Care For Your Car !"

=====

"The Best Tax Service Anywhere Around The Town !"

OR

"Your Tax Experts At Work !"

=====

"Emergency ambulance service available 24-hours a day"

OR

"When Minutes Count!"

Well, you get the idea!

Do some test marketing with your final two or three best taglines. Discover the one that works

Remember, like any of life's endeavors, experience and practice help to improve your skills le

Best of luck with your promotional efforts.
